Housing

Tenant's Rights

No one has to live in unsafe, hazardous, or unsanitary conditions. Tenants have the right to request an inspection and if necessary proactively sue their landlord to enforce the D.C. housing code. It is a violation of local housing laws for landlords to ignore any problem that constitutes a fire hazard or a serious threat to the life, health, or safety of the tenant. These conditions include but are not limited to the following:

- Mice
- Rats
- Roaches
- Mold
- Lead
- Leaky pipes
- Lack of heat and hot water
- Electrical problems
- Inoperable smoke or carbon monoxide detectors

Reasonable Accommodations

Landlords are required to make reasonable accommodations to an apartment or to the program rules in order to accommodate a household member's physical or mental disability. Accommodations or modifications that are considered reasonable and are required under the law include:

- Lower cabinets for someone in a wheelchair.
- Install grab bars in bathrooms.
- Install ramps when there are less than five steps.
- Install fire alarms that flash for people with hearing impairments.

Special Education

Free and Appropriate Public Education (FAPE): Every student with a disability is entitled to receive a FAPE in the least restrictive environment that can meet the child's unique needs.

FAPE includes: Any services that a child requires in order to learn such as: specialized instruction, speech, occupational or physical therapy, or psychological counseling.

Child Find: State-mandated plan to ensure that all children, ages 3-22, who need special education and related services are identified and evaluated.

Individualized Education Plan (IEP): A document that describes the special education and related services a child who qualifies for services is to receive.

504 Plan Accommodations: Some children with disabilities may not qualify for an IEP, but may qualify for accommodations under a 504 plan.

Obtaining Special Education Services

1. Request for Special Education Evaluation: Anyone, including a doctor, can make a request, which must be in writing. Parental consent is required before the school may evaluate the child. The school must assess in all areas of suspected disability.
2. Evaluation Timeframe: DC schools have 120 days from the date the referral is received to complete the assessment and determine if the child has a disability that affects his or her learning. The evaluation tests are free.
3. IEP Development: If at a meeting of all relevant school staff and the parent, it is determined that the child has a disability that affects his or her classroom experience, an IEP must be developed by the MDT/IEP team within 30 days.
4. Placement: The child should receive special education services with typically developing peers as much as possible, unless the child's needs require a different setting.

Children Birth to Age 3

Children birth to age 3 who have developmental delays also have a right to be provided early intervention services that include having service providers come to the child's home or day care setting.

School Discipline Concerns

Students with special needs cannot be suspended for more than 10 days in a school year if the behaviors are a manifestation of the child's disability. Regardless, a school must provide services to special needs students during a suspension.

Regular education students have protections for suspensions and expulsions as well—including the right to written notice of the suspension and the right to challenge it legally.

Visiting Instruction Services

All students unable to attend school due to a disability or health impairment have the right to receive education services at home or in the hospital.
